

Passage:

Anna is a high school student who is at a crossroads regarding her future career. She has always been interested in medicine, as she feels a strong desire to help people in need. Therefore, she may pursue a degree in medical science. However, Anna also loves art and has a talent for painting, which leads her to think that she might want to explore a career as an artist instead.

Her parents, who have always supported her ambitions, believe that she ought to choose a career that aligns with her passions and makes her happy. They often remind her, “You shall take your time to think about your options and not rush into any decisions.” Anna appreciates their advice, knowing that choosing a career is an important step in her life.

To help clarify her thoughts, Anna plans to talk to her teachers and friends about their experiences. She might also shadow professionals in both fields to see which environment she prefers. Anna understands that whatever decision she makes will impact her life significantly, and she wants to be sure she makes the right choice.

As she contemplates her future, Anna is filled with both excitement and uncertainty. She knows that the right path may not be clear now, but she is determined to find it.
